FLOWER INTRODUCTION

Special feature

Flannel flower "Fairy White"

The texture of flannel flowers is densely covered with fine hairs and resembles flannel, a light and soft woolen fabric. Similarly, the flannel plant (Lychnis coronaria), which has leaves with a flannel-like texture, is an entirely different plant in the Caryophyllaceae family.

It blooms white flowers with green on the tip of the petals. Gray-green foliage is also attractive. The progenitor is relatively tall. It was difficult to handle as a potted flower that you don't want to expose to rain, so it was only seen as a cut flower, but in recent years, the improved dwarf variety "Fairy White" has become popular. The flowers are single white with green at the tip of the petals. The flowers grow one after another and have a long flowering period. The leaves are grey-green with fine hairs.

Yellow rose "Yellow Eternity"

Yellow Eternity is a rose variety with bright yellow flowers. The petals become lighter in color towards the outside. The size of the flower is about 8-10 cm, and the flower shape changes from cup-shaped at the beginning of bloom to rosette-like, and looks like a peony. It blooms all four seasons and has good flowers, and flowers bloom until late autumn.

Claretum bellidiforme

Livingstone daisy is an annual plant belonging to the genus Kreletum of the family Poisnaceae, distributed in South Africa. The distribution area is from the Northern Cape Province to the Western Cape Province in South Africa, and grows naturally in sandy areas and rocky areas, mainly in areas where it rains in winter. Many plants native to South Africa are cultivated for ornamental purposes, but among them, this species Livingstone Daisy is the most famous and introduced plant all over the world.

The flower colors are pink, red, orange, yellow, white, etc., and there are also many that show color changes from the base to the tip of the pseudostamens, making them extremely versatile.

It likes a warm and sunny environment. Keep it from freezing in winter. In addition, it is vulnerable to high temperature, high humidity and dryness, and the stock will die when the temperature rises in early summer. Poor drainage can lead to root rot, so it is important that the plant has good drainage and does not dry out.

Pink rose

Pink, which has a soft and gentle impression, is one of the most feminine rose colors.

The gentle pink color of the flower has a relaxing effect that makes you feel at ease, and is also said to be a color that invites happy feelings. A happy mood also promotes the secretion of female hormones. Pink helps femininity and is also the color that brings happiness.

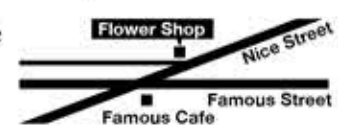

How about a bouquet of pink roses, a magical flower color that brings beauty and happiness to women?
